"Memory and History of Peace, An Unavoidable Debate"

Memory is essential for knowing who we are and who we want to be, but above all what we have done in the past and what we want to do about the future. Looking at the History of Humanity as an Event of Violence, War, tyrannies and massacres is a skewed look that probably conditions a future with more wars and violence. They should not be denied, but the countless stories of peace should be also highlighted, since they have been part of all the centuries of humanity, and they have made us live - in spite of everything - in better conditions that decades and centuries ago. If we want to ensure that the future has more peace than war, we must to contribute decisively to a History of Peace that is also a future of Reconciliation.
